4	In India the question of legalising euthanasia came during the case of State of Maharashtra v Maruti Sharipathi Dasai. After the decision of Supreme Court in Aruna Shanbaug cae, 2011, a nurse who was in a vegetative state for 37 years as a result of sexual assault, India allowed 'passive euthanasia' in exceptional cases on 7 th march, 2011 after a review by medical experts, while 'active euthanasia' is not allowed. Aruna's condition forced the court to consider passive euthanasia. This landmark decision legalised passive euthanasia, giving thousands of of patients living in a persistent vegetative state all over the country, the right to have artificial life- support system withdrawn so as to enable them to end a life of misery. The court held that there is no right to die under Article 21 of the Constitution but causing the death of a person who is in permanent persistent vegetative state, with no chance of recovery, by withdrawing artificial life support is not a 'positive act of killing' Terming this 'passive euthanasia', a bench of Justice Markandey Katju and Gyan Sudha Mishra held that this could be permitted on a case by case basis.	20	CO3

	The court also laid down guidelines for passive euthanasia such as that the matter must be referred to the High Court for a decision and that the doctor or the patient or the spouse of the patient must be one of the petitioner for the withdrawal of life support system. A special two judge bench will be formed in every High Court to decide application seeking permission for euthanasia. A committee of three reputed doctors from panel constituted by the High Court in consultation with state government will examine the patient and submit its report to the High Court bench. Notices will be issued to all those concerned with the doctor’s report attached. After hearing everyone, the bench will give its verdict. The matter must be dealt with speedily as delays prolong the agony of the patient. But in a historic decision (2018) the Supreme Court declared passive euthanasia and the right of persons, including the terminally ill to give advance directives to refuse medical treatment permissible. The Supreme Court in its judgment upheld that the fundamental right to a “meaningful existence” includes a person’s choice to die without suffering A) Suggest a suitable title for the above passage and justify the title.  B) Write the precis of above paragraph in your own words as plainly as possible.
